In the Clinic: Work Conditioning

SERC Physical and Hand Therapy offers an individualized work conditioning program to return the injured worker to gainful employment in the safest and most efficient way possible. We offer half day and full day programs, which generally last from two to six weeks.

At SERC, physical therapists individually monitor the client's progress throughout his or her program. The client is not simply handed a clipboard and left to work independently. Instead, the therapist and the client work together to establish goals, set time frames to reach those goals, and consistently monitor the client's progress towards the goals.

Throughout the work conditioning program, our therapists continue the rehabilitation process with the client, as well.

This enables the client to enter the work conditioning program at an earlier time, which allows for a more expeditious return to work.

Because SERC performs traditional physical therapy and work conditioning, the client may not have to participate in a full-fledged work conditioning program. Our physical therapists are able to continually assess clients, and help them progress by incorporating individual pieces of the work conditioning program while the patient is still in acute care. Because of this, the client can return to work more quickly.

At SERC, our goal is to ensure that each client receives personal, individualized care from a trained physical therapist, resulting in a successful return to the work force.

Congratulations to ELENA LEAL
the winner of the drawing for $150 towards Continuing Education!

Thanks to everyone who returned their forms by June 30th!

We are still hoping to receive a completed information sheet from every case manager, in order to keep our database up to date. If you need another copy of the form, please contact us at one of the numbers listed above. Thank you!
